THE LEGACY OF KANNAUJ

The Perfume Capital of India

Kannauj has been known as the perfume capital of India for centuries. The city carries a legacy of traditional fragrance-making dating back to the Mughal era.

The art of crafting attars in Kannauj is not factory production — it is heritage craftsmanship passed from generation to generation.

At Pushpsaar Perfumes, we preserve this authentic tradition by creating natural attars using traditional hydro-distillation methods inside copper vessels known as Deg Bhapka.

OUR PHILOSOPHY

Tradition Meets Luxury

Pushpsaar Perfumes was created to bring authentic Kannauj fragrances to modern luxury markets while preserving traditional methods.

Unlike synthetic perfumes, attars are oil-based natural fragrances known for:

Long-lasting aroma

Alcohol-free composition

Rich depth

Skin-friendly application

Our fragrances are inspired by:

Indian flowers

Earth after rain

Sandalwood forests

Mughal perfumery traditions

Middle Eastern luxury fragrance culture

THE DEGBHAPKA PROCESS

The Art of Traditional Attar Distillation

"THIS IS WHAT GIVES AUTHENTIC KANNAUJ ATTARS THEIR SOUL."

STEP 1 — FILLING THE DEG

Fresh ingredients are placed inside a large copper vessel called the Deg along with water.

STEP 2 — HEATING PROCESS

The Deg is heated slowly over firewood or coal fire. Steam carrying aromatic molecules begins to rise.

STEP 3 — VAPOUR TRANSFER

The fragrant vapours travel through a bamboo pipe into another copper receiver known as the Bhapka.

STEP 4 — SANDALWOOD ABSORPTION

The vapours condense into sandalwood oil, naturally absorbing the fragrance.

STEP 5 — AGING

The attar is matured over time to develop deeper richness and complexity.

PURE ROSE WATER

Freshly Harvested from Kannauj

100% NATURAL EDIBLE ROSE WATER

Our rose water is traditionally distilled using fresh roses through hydro-distillation methods inspired by ancient Kannauj practices.
